

Washington Heights Eruv Map

Parameters of the Eruv

- The southern boundary is 181st St. Only the northern side of the street is included - you may not carry at any point on the southern side of 181st St. You also may not carry on 181st St west of the entrance to 867 W 181st St (between Cabrini and Haven), or east of Bennett Ave.
- Please note that the north-east corner of Bennett and 181st is not in the eruv. If you are walking on 181st, and going to a building on the east side of Bennett, between 181st and 184th (which are all inside the eruv), please turn onto Bennett on the west side of the street and cross Bennett at a later point.
- The western sidewalk of Broadway is in the eruv, from the entrance to 4305 Broadway (just south of 184th St) until the south-west corner of Broadway and 192nd, inclusive.
- The northern boundary on Broadway and Bennett is 192nd St. Only the southern side of 192nd is included in the eruv.
- The northern boundary on Fort Washington Avenue is where the street meets Margaret Corbin Circle (labeled Traffic Circle on the map). Both sides of Cabrini Boulevard, where it meets the circle, are in the eruv.
- Margaret Corbin Circle and Fort Tryon Park are not in the eruv. The playground on the west side of Ft Wash, south of the circle, is included, as is Bennett Park on Ft Wash between 183rd and 185th.
- The western boundary of the eruv is the cliff wall supporting Cabrini Boulevard. This means that all the buildings on Cabrini and Chittenden are included, but Riverside Drive is not.
- If the entrance to a building is in the eruv, then the building is in the eruv.
- Please note that there is another eruv in Washington Heights, surrounding the Yeshiva University campus. The two eruvim are not currently connected, meaning you cannot carry from one to the other.
- Please contact the eruv committee or the Rabbi with any questions regarding the boundaries of the eruv.
